

UN Global Initiative To Increase Quality Of Life For All Humanity

The Goal

The purpose of this subdivision of the UN is to give world leaders a single place to go for any aid needed in giving their people the highest quality of life that they can for their people.

The Hotlines

The opening thrust of this initiative will be to provide each leader of every country represented at the UN with access to a hotline. This is a place where any leader can place a feature request or emergency request.

The smaller countries with little or no resources will be responsible for manning the various different sections of the hotline. This will be their way of contributing to the global effort.

An example is Nauru will be responsible for taking and providing emergency requests involving natural disasters while Palau will take emergency requests involving disease and so on.

Feature requests will be handled the same way with a small country being responsible for taking the request and doing all investigation necessary to write the request in a very clear way.

Breakdown of the Countries

The top twenty economies of the world will be responsible for taking the feature requests and finding a profitable way to fill the need and an example of how these requests should be handled is the Panama canal. The top twenty economies have the experience with money that is necessary to complete these tasks which is why they are being called on in this way. If a world leader decides that he or she needs a farm or a school but can not figure out how to provide it then these countries will find a profitable way to make that happen. If no profitable way can be found then it will go to the management countries to determine what to do.

The management countries will be the countries ranked as the top ten in quality of life. Since they have done better at quality of life than anyone else, it only makes sense that they should be tasked with calling the shots in the quality of life initiative. These countries will call the shots and be responsible for coordinating the other countries. They will also prioritize the feature requests.

There will also be the media blitz group which will consist of smaller countries since this requires less people and their role will be to make sure that every person in the world is watching when a genocide, attack, drought or anything bad happens that requires everyone's attention.

Finally, all the unassigned countries left will be organized into groups of seven and in a way where the groups have close to the same population. These countries will be responsible for taking the highest priority emergency ticket and helping those who are experiencing the emergency.

That will be the break down of the countries into a management team, feature request countries, emergency ticket countries, and the media blitz countries.

Final Example and reason it is necessary

The system is designed so that all world leaders do not have to go it alone and each will be given access to the hotline. It will do team building amongst the different countries as they all work together to generate the highest quality of life for all humanity.

Any military act or intentional atrocity (internal or external) will result in immediate loss of access and participation to this hotline and the leader will not have access to the help of the world anymore.

Here is an example:

Say hyperinflation is setting in. The leader calls the hotline and is assigned to a team consisting of Canada, Venezuela, South Africa, Luxemburg, and the Philippines. They all work in tandem to figure out solutions to the problem. Eventually their combined resources allow them to fix the problem and their recording of the fix now means that all world leaders have access to how to fix the problem.